NO DEARTH OF STEEL

Transportation and Weather Conditions Will Not Matter, Says Director

Points Emphasized by Lord Reading's Visit

Lord Reading believes Allied commanders have plan by which the Germans will be defeated in the present great offensive. There will be plenty of steel for American shipbuilding regardless of transportation and weather conditions, said Charles M. Schwab. Officials of shipping board and Emergency Fleet Corporation have promises of American steel manufacturers to keep supply equal to demand. Lord Reading expressed amazement at the progress American industry for war has made. British people will be appraised of the true situation as regards shipbuilding and munition manufacture here through British official channels at the direction of British Ambassador.

GERMANS' RIGHT FLANK BENT SOUTH OF SOISSONS; FAIL TO DRIVE OVER MARNE

Germans' Next Move Likely to Alter Whole Situation

NO FEAR FOR OUTCOME

By PHILIP GIBBS

Special Cable to Evening Public Ledger Copyright, 1918, by New York Times Co. War Correspondents' Headquarters on the Western Front, June 1. On our front north of Soissons to Flanders, the French armies and people while our men stand and wait, knowing the crisis of the war for the time being is away on the Marne, where some of their comrades with the French armies have been fighting. Their turn to resist the German onslaught may come soon, for it is still possible the enemy may strike us in the north unless he decides to shift his full weight to the present zone of action in the hope of gaining the road to Paris. That decision will depend, no doubt, upon his guesswork as to the strength of the French resistance which he will have to face on the Marne, but in any case it is likely he will attack the main British front in order to hold our divisions where they stand.

Meanwhile, we who are waiting and watching feel something of that tension which I remember in the early days of the war before the first battle of the Marne, when, in spite of grave anxiety, the French armies and people and our own gallant men of the first expeditionary force had absolute faith that the German hordes would be checked and broken. That is our faith now, and after nearly four years of heroic struggle and infinite self-sacrifice the French and British troops are not less resolved to defy victory to the enemy than were those who chased them back across the Marne in 1914. In the afternoon, the sun is hot over the fields of France and poppies are in full bloom in the wheat, and while dust rises like smoke along the roads the men go marching to the rescue of the French. But there is a difference on these roads. It is the answer to Continued on Page Five, Column One

THE WAR SITUATION TODAY

All German efforts to cross the Marne River have been repulsed. Allied resistance on the Aisne-Marne battlefield is stiffening. Effective counter-measures were employed along the left flank, south of Soissons. The French recaptured important ground, throwing the Germans back upon the Crise River. The foe was prevented from debouching westward from the Soissons-Chateau Thierry road. The Allied forces still cling tenaciously to Rheims, although the Germans are making savage assaults along the line of Dormans and Thillois.

Gen. Petain Hopes for Same Beginning of Marne Battle

Paris, June 1.—"May the battle of the Marne begin again as it did four years ago," General Petain declared in a special order of the day, issued today.

Paris, June 1

The French, by vigorous counter-attack, have driven in the right flank of the German salient, south of Soissons.

The Germans have failed to cross the Marne. Their advance has been halted on the north bank where, according to today's War Office report, outposts have reached the river on a thirteen-mile front between Chateau-Thierry and Verneuil. All efforts to force a passage have been thwarted. The British and French will hold Rheims, according to terms of the communication.

Violent fighting occurred yesterday evening and night on the left flank, near Soissons, the French have driven the Germans back on the left by counter-attacks, recapturing Chacrise and Vierzy, and driving several hundred prisoners.

Sharp fighting is going on along the road from Rheims to Soissons on the right. The French are still holding every bridgehead passage across the Marne, a dispatch from the Allies brought here by courier. The result of this determined resistance, the Germans apparently have withdrawn to the edge of the river back of the plateau above the valley, where they are seeking to advance to the westward.

French Communication

The official statement follows:

The German attack continued yesterday evening and last night. It was violent on the Soissons to Chateau-Thierry. On the Chateau-Thierry front, the French have driven the Germans back on the left by counter-attacks, recapturing Chacrise and Vierzy, and driving several hundred prisoners.

Some of the main work of the day was done by the French on the left flank, where they have driven the Germans back on the left by counter-attacks, recapturing Chacrise and Vierzy, and driving several hundred prisoners.

German Efforts to Recapture Village Repulsed With Heavy Losses

VICTORIES CAUSE JOY

By EDWIN L. JAMES
Special Cable to Evening Public Ledger Copyright, 1918, by New York Times Co. With the American Army in France, June 1. News of the success of our soldiers fighting near Montdidier caused the greatest joy among American forces remaining in this section. Those with a knowledge of boche tactics looked for a strong attack against the Americans a day or so after their taking of Cantigny, with the probability of the enemy being driven back. Enthusiasm was felt over the fact that our men have been able to hold the salient despite counter-attacks by the Germans. With the American Army on the French Battlefield, June 1. The Americans holding Cantigny have repulsed the Germans with heavy losses to the attackers every time Hindenburg's men have tried to recapture the town. The American artillery has proved so effective that the Germans have been unable to concentrate a big force of infantry opposite the Americans without suffering heavy casualties. As a consequence the German army has been unidirectionally over this section. Two of them yesterday penetrated thirty kilometers behind the American lines. One of these was the three-seater which was shot down. French airmen drove the machine down.

Rheims Now Held Tightly; Foch's Counter Imminent

Special Cable to Evening Public Ledger Copyright, 1918, by New York Times Co. Paris, June 1. Rheims now lies in No Man's Land, surrounded on three sides by the enemy. It is only free on the south, where it is covered by the mountain of Rheims, which dominates and protects what is left of it. The gaunt spires of the cathedral stand like a specter in the midst. The French have in the mountain of Rheims, covered with forest and honeycombed with fortifications of all kinds, a defensive position of the first class, which may be relied upon to enable them to hold back the enemy on this side until General Foch's imminent counter-attack in the adjacent plain between the Marne and the Aisne can develop itself.

CORNELL FIGHTS TO RETAIN CROWN

Dartmouth and Pittsburgh Surprised the Talent by Scoring Repeatedly

SHEA GREAT QUARTER

By PAUL PREP
Franklin Field, June 1. Cornell was fighting with its back against the wall this afternoon to retain its crown as intercollegiate champion in the forty-second running of the I. C. A. A. A. games at Franklin Field. With four events remaining to be contested Dartmouth had scored 25 points and Pittsburgh had as many as Cornell—23. In the remaining events, however, Cornell should put over the fourth consecutive victory and grab its eighth leg on the intercollegiate trophy, as the events favor the Ithacans. It was the slimmest attendance that ever looked upon an intercollegiate championship meeting less than 1000 persons being on the grounds when the game got under way. Those who were not on the field were in the North stand. The sections usually reserved for Pennsylvania students were reserved for Cornellians. The majority of the Penn undergrads have scattered to all corners of the earth. Only a few remain for the exams of next week. Owing to the lack of entrants for the

MISSING IN FRANCE

Louis J. Goldman, of This City, Went Overseas in January
Louis J. Goldman, twenty-three years old, a Philadelphia drafted man with the American expeditionary force in France, has been missing since April 28, according to notification sent this afternoon by the War Department to the young man's parents, 3512 North Fifth street. Goldman's mother, Mrs. Michael Goldman, 3512 North Fifth street, Philadelphia, is seriously ill. Young Goldman went with a Philadelphia contingent to Camp Meade November 4, 1917, and sailed for France January 12 this year. Soon after his arrival at the front he was transferred from the infantry to the field artillery. Goldman is unmarried.

By ROBERT W. MAXWELL

Phillies' Ball Park, June 1. Pat Moran's men came from behind in today's game with the Cincinnati Reds, after trailing 2 to 1 for seven innings, and won the ball game by a score of 5 to 2. In the eighth inning the Phillies gave one of their old-time consecutive-hitting contests and before the dust had settled had scored four runs and copped the game. In that inning, with one gone, Cy Williams, Moran's new centerfielder, picked one out to his liking and lifted it over the right-field wall. It was a high fly and just cleared the top by inches. This blow unnerved George Smith, the former Giant twirler, who was pitching, and Stock drove a hard single to right. Neusel thought perhaps he could catch Stock loafing on the hit and threw to first. Sherwood Magee did not expect such a foolish throw and scampered back to the bag to get the throw. Stock crashed into him and sent him sprawling and the ball rolled toward the stands. Stock, reaching second, with Blackburne and Leo Magee on top of him claiming that he had been tagged out, but Umpire Emsall was on top of the play and ruled otherwise. Luders followed with a single, and Gavy Cravath hit the bleacher wall in center, the ball bounding across the field and Gavy's second out. But not for long, as Neusel hit the first pitched ball to center for a single, Cravath tallying the final run, as McGuffigan and Adams were easy outs. The Reds got away to an early lead. In the second inning four singles in quick order brought two markers across the plate. That was all they could do, however, holding them to four scattered hits in the next seven innings. The Phillies picked their first run in the fifth, when with one gone, Mayer socked the ball to the center field bleacher wall for three bases. Bancroft then raised a fly to short left, which Blackburne caught and got. Mayer dashed for home after the catch and made it by a head first slide, beating the relayed throw of Blackburne, Groh to Wingo. A large and enthusiastic crowd witnessed the sport and the weather was hot.
